the Renaissance by Philipp Melanchthon Zeno's most influential follower was Chrysippus, who was responsible for the molding of what is now called Stoicism ISBN 9780393250930 It helps an interested reader delve deeper ^ Robertson, D (2010) Philosophers [edit] Meditations

(1 April 2015) 11 Philosophy for a Stoic is not just a set of beliefs or ethical claims, it is a way of life involving constant practice and training (or askesis, see asceticism) Stoicism, unlike Christianity, does not posit a beginning or end to the universe. [40] 131, June 1925 texts from the Late Stoa survive. [14] Merriam-Webster substance () F253 Both Stoicism and Christianity assert an inner freedom in the face of the external world, a belief in human kinship with Nature or God, a sense of the innate depravity or "persistent evil" of humankind, [40] and the futility and temporariness of worldly possessions and attachments Propositional logic [edit] ^ Kee, Howard and
